Research interests

Syntax, semantics, grammatical theory and the syntax-semantics interface (especially Lexical Functional Grammar and Glue Semantics), pragmatics, (critical) discourse analysis, language & gender, language & sexuality.

Academic employment

01/04/2021present Post-Doctoral Research Fellow in Semantics, University of Oslo.

01/12/2019-31/03/2021 Outreach & Access Officer (for linguistics), University of Oxford.

01/10/2019-

Departmental Lecturer in Syntax, University of Oxford.

01/10/2019-30/09/2020 Stipendiary Lecturer in Linguistics, Jesus College, University of Oxford.

01/10/2018-

Stipendiary Lecturer in Linguistics, St Hugh's College, University of Oxford.

30/092019

Education

11/10/2015-

D.Phil. in Comparative Philology & General Linguistics.

06/05/2019 University of Oxford.

THESIS TITLE: Multiword expressions and the lexicon [pdf].

SUPERVISORS: Ash Asudeh, Mary Dalrymple. Examiners: Stephen Pulman, Tom Wasow.

09/10/2012-

M.Phil. (with distinction) in General Linguistics & Comparative Philology.

30/06/2014 University of Oxford.

THESIS TITLE: The prepositional passive: a Lexical Functional account.

SUPERVISOR: Mary Dalrymple.

01/09/2011-

Graduate Programme in Linguistics.

06/12/2011

McGill University.

Attended for one term. GPA 3.92.

09/10/2007-30/06/2011 B.A. (with First Class Honours) in Modern Languages (French) & Linguistics.

University of Oxford.

Teaching qualifications

05/12/2017

SEDA-PDF Supporting Learning award.

Mapped to Descriptor 1 of the UK Professional Standards Framework: equivalent to Associate Fellow of the Higher Education Academy.

My portfolio submission is available online here.

Other professional experience

01/07/2012-

Linguistic Consultant, Freelance.

Expert consultancy services in and around general linguistics and NLP. This involved data annotation, resource mining and compilation, data analysis, and creative copywriting. I have worked with researchers at the University of Oxford and at Queen Mary University London, as well as with private enterprises such as TheySay Analytics.

01/12/2014-30/09/2015 Part-time Research Assistant, Oxford English Dictionary, Oxford University Press.

Research experience

Note: My publications and talks are given on pp. 6ff. This section gives details of some recent projects, with (clickable) cross-references to related publications and talks.

Multiword expressions and the lexicon

[syntax, semantics]

OVERVIEW:

My D.Phil. thesis ([1]) gives an analysis of multiword expressions (MWEs), especially idioms. It argues against approaches which conceive of idioms like spill the beans as being made up special versions of spill and beans, and in favour of approaches which reaffirm the mixed nature of MWEs as partially word-like and partially phrase-like. It then develops a concrete example of the latter kind of theory, integrating insights from Tree-Adjoining Grammar into the Lexical Functional Grammar architecture.

OUTCOMES:

I have presented this work at peer-reviewed conferences for computational linguists ([19]), theoretical syntacticians ([17]), and for more general linguistics audiences ([15]). The work has also appeared in the proceedings of two of these conferences ([7], [8]). I have also organised a collaboration with researchers at the Goethe-Universität Frankfurt am Main, where I conducted a research visit in June 2018.

FUTURE WORK:

Sascha Bargmann, Manfred Sailer and I are developing a semantic theory of the 'extended' use of idioms, exemplified in e.g. Once this cat is out of the bag, a lot of people are going to get scratched, where the underlying metaphor is used to make sense of a figurative continuation ([12], [13], [22], [25]).

Mapping Theory

[syntax, semantics]

OVERVIEW:

Mapping Theory is a theory within LFG which handles the linking of grammatical functions in the syntax with argument positions in the semantics. My work on this topic addresses a previous lack of explicit formalisation in this area, by formalising the version of Mapping Theory developed by Anna Kibort. This work has proved influential, and so-called 'Kibort-Findlay Mapping Theory' now constitutes the state of the art.

OUTCOMES:

My original approach was published in the Journal of Language Modelling ([4]), while a formally cleaner version was presented at the LFG Conference in 2020 ([11]) and will appear in the proceedings ([6]). Anna Kibort and I have also written a chapter on Mapping Theory for the upcoming Handbook of Lexical Functional Grammar ([??]).

FUTURE WORK:

Going forward, I intend to improve the cross-linguistic coverage of the theory, testing how well the formal system I have developed can cope with the different argument structures and valency altering operations of the world's languages.

Discourses of homosexuality

[sociolinguistics, corpus linguistics]

OVERVIEW:

I conducted a short research project using corpus linguistic and critical discourse analysis tools to examine the UK House of Lords debates on same-sex marriage in 2013. This contributed to a growing literature both on debates around same-sex marriage legislation and also on implicit homophobia.

OUTCOMES:

My findings were reported at the IGALA conference in 2014 ([21]) and published in the Journal of Language and Sexuality ([3]).

FUTURE WORK:

I would like to continue this research by examining parliamentary debates from other countries where discursive norms differ in interesting ways, such as the focus on family values and religion in Uganda or the USA.

Teaching

I have taught syntax, semantics & pragmatics, sociolinguistics, psycholinguistics, and general linguistics at both the introductory and advanced undergraduate level. At the graduate level, I have led courses in syntax, and TA-ed for courses in syntax, phonology, and formal foundations of linguistics (the latter being an introduction to set theory, logic, and formal language theory for linguists). This teaching experience covers small group and tutorial settings, larger classes, and lectures, including designing tutorial courses and lecture series. I hold a SEDA-PDF Supporting Learning award (see above).

In this section, years refer to the academic calendar (e.g. 2017 = the 2017/18 academic year).

University of Oxford

GRADUATE LEVEL

As primary instructor

2019–2020 Contemporary Syntactic Theory (lectures and classes – group size: ~12).

2019-2020 Introduction to Syntax (lectures - group size: ~25).

As TA

2017-2018 Formal Foundations of Linguistics (classes - group size: ~25).

An introduction to set theory, logic, and formal language theory for linguists.

2015–2016 Introduction to Syntax (classes – group size: ~25).

2014 Introduction to Phonology (classes – group size: 12).

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE LEVEL

2014–2016, Syntax (tutorials – group size: 1–3).

2019-2020

2018–2019 General Linguistics (tutorials – group size: 2–3).

A survey module which covers the development of linguistic theory since the 19th century.

2017–2019 Sociolinguistics (tutorials – group size: 1–3).

2018 Psycholinguistics (tutorials – group size: 1–3).

2014–2017 Semantics & Pragmatics (tutorials – group size: 1–3).

FIRST-YEAR UNDERGRADUATE LEVEL

2014, 2018–2020 Grammatical Analysis (classes – group size: 3–6).

An introduction to both syntax and morphology.

2014, 2018–2019 General Linguistics (tutorials – group size: 2–3).

An introductory course which covers topics in general linguistics proper, along with psycholinguistics, semantics & pragmatics, sociolinguistics, and historical linguistics.

2018 Psycholinguistics (lectures – group size: ~50).

2017 Semantics & Pragmatics (lectures – group size: ~50).

IRREGULAR CLASSES

2016, 2019 Language and identity: the view from linguistics (class – group size: ~6).

An introduction to sociolinguistics for first year English language and literature undergraduates. Handout available here.

3

2017 Corpus methods in sociolinguistics (graduate class – group size: 3).

2016-2017, 2019

LATEX workshops: 'LATEX' basics' and 'Going further with LATEX'.

2020-2021

Caitlyn McDermott. Linguistic project (thesis with a large data collection/analysis component). Title tbc (discourse analysis of US media representations of mass shootings). BA in Psychology & Linguistics.

Grants and awards

May 2018 Scatcherd European Scholarship.

Value: £1,000. Awarded, with the next award, for a research visit to the Goethe-Universität Frankfurt am Main.

Mar. 2018 Santander Academic Travel Award.

Value: £1,000.

Oct. 2015- Professor Paul Slack Scholarship, Linacre College, University of Oxford.

June 2017 Total value: ~£14,000 (fees for first 2 years of D.Phil.).

Oct. 2015 - AHRC Studentship, Faculty of Linguistics, Philology & Phonetics, University of Oxford.

June 2017 Total value: £28,353 (living costs for first 2 years of D.Phil.).

July 2014 George Wolf Prize, Faculty of Linguistics, Philology & Phonetics, University of Oxford. Awarded for best overall performance in the M.Phil. or M.St. degree.

June 2014 Graduate student essay prize, International Gender and Language Association.

Oct. 2012- AHRC Studentship, Faculty of Linguistics, Philology & Phonetics, University of Oxford.

June 2014 Total value: ~£38,000 (fees and living costs for M.Phil.).

Sept. 2011- McCall McBain Fellowship, McGill University.

June 2013 Total value: ~CAN$62,000 (fees and living costs for 2-year MA degree); partially declined.

Oct. 2008- Casberd Scholarship, St John's College, University of Oxford.

June 2011 Awarded for achieving a distinction in first year examinations. Total value: ~£900.
